From all that I have read concerning the Microsoft Settlement, the judgment rendered by the various courts are in my opinion, more than fair. Because of a few unhappy competitors who want to upset the settlement without legitimate reason, other than greed, seems to me to be most unfair. Microsoft is one of the finest and best run companies in the USA, known world wide for it's innovation and useful output and whose foreign as well as domestic sales add millions to the GNP. Now some less efficient and less innovative companies want Microsoft penalized further, so they can take advantage of the very market created by Microsoft. And the States that want more money need to stop their own inefficiencies and not try to balance an out of kilter budget be getting a freebie from some other entity, while they fritter away on boondoggles, the taxes they receive.
